Essential oils are gaining worldwide recognition for their versatility, but their use is not necessarily new. The use of botanicals as healing agents is a long-standing practice throughout human history. In fact, essential oils and other botanicals have been used in wellness

Testimony Time

"My husband couldn't sleep last night because his chest hurt from eating spicy foods. We tried rubbing lemon and peppermint over the esophagus, which helped some, but not enough. So I put one drop peppermint and two drops lemon in a quart of water for him to drink. After just 8 oz of water, it was gone! Bonus side effect: his body temp cooled down (he's always hot) and we decided this drink might actually save on the electric bill this summer!" ~Simply Natural Member

- Never put oils in your ear canal or in your eyes. In the event that you get oils in your eyes, get a fatty oil and use it around your eye. It will draw out the oil.
